

Altarea acquires Prejeance Industrial and enhances its photovoltaic installation development platform in France

Altarea announces that it has finalized today the acquisition of Prejeance Industrial from the spanish group Repsol. This operation enhances the photovoltaic installation development platform in France that the Group implemented in 2023 as part of the new activities segment of its strategic roadmap.

Founded in 2019, Prejeance Industrial (PI) is a French company specializing in the development of small to medium-sized rooftop photovoltaic projects (between 100 and 500 kWp¹), mainly on agricultural sheds. Its experienced team (18 employees) is involved at all stages of the solar power project lifecycle: development, construction, asset management, financing/refinancing. These installations provide genuine renewable energy solutions, while offering farmers additional income and agricultural equipment with no aditionnal cost. As of the end of June 2024, the company owns and operates a total installed capacity of over 42 MWp entirely located in France and is developing a controlled project pipeline of nearly 400 MWp, including 41 MWp under construction.

The investment amount is approximately €140 million (including approximately €25 million of goodwill and €115 million of solar power plants in operation, in construction or under development). PI will be consolidated into the Group's accounts starting from the second half of 2024.
